

How the site of an airport will alter next year, after redevelopment, is illustrated in the plans.

Generally, it is conspicuous that now there are just some rudimentary facilities although the site will witness dramatic changes by the next year. To elaborate more, security passport control and passport control customs will experience no changes. However, the building of check-in will be expanded and will be turned over to a bag drop. A check-in will be constructed instead of place that the café is now, and two cafes will be built at two corners of the site. There will be also an ATM and a place that passengers can hire cars. Further development will be the construction of a shop near security passport control. Additionally, the number of gates will be escalated by 10 in the next year. Likewise, the number of doors for entering and exiting will double. Finally, the walk way will be converted to a sky train.

Overall, by the next year, more facilities will be provided in the site of airport.
